FOR THE WEEK ENDING
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1885.

In No. 451 of the POLICE GAZETTE will be published the first installment of an original sensational story copiously illustrated by sketches from real life, entitled

by "An Old Rounder."

This will be the most thorough and startling photograph of the American metropolis ever printed

OURSELVES.

This week's magnificent quadruple page, with its scenes of Christmas pleasure, admirably drawn and scrupulously engraved by the best artists on this continent, is a fair sample of the energy and liberality which will always characterize in the future, as it has always characterized in the past, the management of the POLICE GAZETTE. No illustrated newspaper on the American continent has ever been permitted to equal our display of forethought and generosity in supplying the people of the United States with an incomparably vivid portrayal of the principal persons and sensational events which have made up the newspaper history of this country. No pains, no labor, and, above all, no money, are allowed to stand between Richard K. Fox and the accomplishment of his one predominating ambition—the success and popularity of the POLICE GAZETTE.

The year of triumph which will soon close will be followed by another even more remarkable for the accomplishments of this journal. Whatever was good and startling and elaborately done in 1885 will be repeated with double effect in 1886. The great cause of National sport, which no other periodical in the country has so served and promoted as the POLICE GAZETTE, will be advanced by every encouragement, prize and reward possible to invent or offer.

Richard K. Fox, as we have said before, has not shrunk from any outlay of his means or any personal devotion to the object, when it has devolved upon him to keep many sports, on American soil, upon the high and prosperous level on which the POLICE GAZETTE first placed them. That boxing, wrestling, rowing, etc., have risen from actual obscurity, under his encouragement, to the state of honorable and profitable occupations is a fact which is proved by unsought evidence all the world over. His energy and his enterprise have, in truth, attracted foreign talent and courage, like a beacon-light, from every civilized country.

Not content with achieving this, however, he intends, in the future, to keep up the extraordinary quality of the POLICE GAZETTE as a general newspaper. Every event of sensational importance, no matter in what part of the country it may occur, will be profusely illustrated. Every person made famous by position or crime will be faithfully portrayed. It will be, in every sense, the greatest of all American illustrated newspapers as it always has been, in the past, the one illustrated American newspaper to which those of Europe are willing to confess themselves inferior.

THE ROPE'S END.

Riel has been executed in spite of or on account of the Herald's tremendous exertions to save his life. The French Canadians were by no means unanimous in asking for a reprieve. While Bishop Fabre, of Montreal, or rather the journal he controls, said that the execution of the half-breed leader would be "judicial assassination," the Bishop of Prince Albert in a sermon preached recently in the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Montreal, referred to Riel as a half-breed chieftain whose extravagant notions had led him away and who had urged the ignorant people into rebellion against church and State. He went on to depict the awful ravages caused by the war—homes destroyed, women outraged and men murdered—and said Riel had defied the priests and murdered two of them. He closed by inferring that Riel had deserved his fate.

And the odds are he did.

O'DONOVAN ROSSA appears to be giving his mouth a rest.

WHAT Servia and Bulgaria seem to need most is a patrol wagon or two.

THAT Canadian cat which has the small-pox had probably never been vaccinated with a bootjack.

EVERY man who goes to the telephone says Hello, but before he comes away he says, O, h—, but never mind.

If they really establish that chair of matrimony at Vassar, care should be taken to have it well upholstered with a man.

THAT Grant monument fund has evidently been struck with paralysis. The rich men of the metropolis have nothing to spare.

THE most effective temperance reform ever begun in Australia is announced. A bill has been presented in the local parliament to abolish barmalids.

NEW YORK Prohibitionists have expelled a member of one of their societies for being a "crank." It is seldom that the beam in one's own eye is perceived.

MINNIE HAUCK has decided to abolish the bouquet nonsense so far as she is concerned by refusing to receive bouquets on the stage. Hauck could she ever do it?

We see it stated that Rev. Sam Jones intends to visit Washington. He will have a big job in attempting to tackle Congress, but let him go ahead on the Congressional Record and all will be forgiven.

SOME Philadelphia journals have been terribly shocked by Judie's performances in that extremely moral city. It's all right to elect prison birds to office there, but the line must be drawn at the French actress.

THE main use to which the skating rinks seem to be put this year is to burn them up. This is the destination to which the good preachers last year consigned them, and which they are realizing much soberer than was expected.

By an oversight, last week, Mr. J. F. Morgan was paraphrased as the manager of the well-known house of Smith, the latter. As a matter of fact, Mr. Morgan is the general manager of the Smith Manufacturing Company, of 123 Fulton street, New York.

PASTOR DOWNES, recently convicted of too high an appreciation of the virtues—or absence of them—of the consort of Mr. Taber, has a wife and eight children. The poor pastor has proved that there are a great many ups and Downes in this wicked world.

TEN Mormon apostles published a card at Salt Lake announcing the excommunication of Apostle Albert Carrington, after a patient trial by the authorities of the church, for adultery and lascivious conduct. If Apostle Carrington had only lived in Boston, now —?

THE Grand Forks Plaindealer would like to know just what a mugwump is. He is every-eyed and sheepish-looking individual you meet, who looked and acted as if he owned the globe up to the day of the New York election but would now sell himself for a nickel, and consider his purchaser badly cheated at that.

THE Cincinnati Telephone Company removed the telephone of a subscriber who swore because he couldn't get his correspondent, which leads the Chicago Herald to remark that if every man who uses a telephone in Chicago and damns it from Texas to breakfast was to be deprived of his instrument, the company would very soon go out of business. That editor is a very phony fellow.

HICKS, the spiritual adviser of Guiteau, sued the Washington Star for $35,000 damages because that paper accused him of selling the assassin's bones to the medical college, and recovered one cent. None of the authorities know what has become of the murderer's bones. They have doubtless been articulated but not set up in the medical museum. It would be a disgraceful proceeding for the government to make a public exhibition of such hideous relics.

NICOLINI, the lanky tenor, has at length secured a divorce from the woman who took in washing while he was exercising on the upper registers. Nicolini and Patti are now legally free from previous matrimonial entanglements, and they will probably attend to that trivial little matter of marriage. It would be just as well, perhaps, in view of the fact that most people have an idea that they should have attended to it some years ago.

The Chief Events of the Week Pictorially Delineated.

A Salvation Show.

The Salvation Army of Boston recently had a baptismal picnic. We illustrate the scene.

The Hanging of Riel.

Among our illustrations this week will be found a vivid picture of the last scene of Louis David Riel's checkered life.

Another Amorous Parson.

Westchester County is all agog over the case of the Rev. Mr. White, accused of violently assaulting the sister-in-law of a brother clergyman. We illustrate the scene.

A Clean Strip.

The other evening Officer Hunt, of Brooklyn, found a five-year-old boy named Freddy Medell, who had been taken by two girls into a hallway and stripped of all his clothing.

A Raid on the Poolsellers.

There was a raid on the poolsellers in the Twenty-ninth Precinct, New York, last Monday, in which two or three policemen were quite savagely handled. The scene is illustrated elsewhere.

A Festive Female Clerk.

We illustrate this week the extraordinary scene lately occurring in the Treasury department at Washington, where a lady clerk was proved to have frequently danced the can-can with the night watchman.

Who Was She?

On Sunday last a handsome couple, elegantly dressed, who were in the act of entering a Presbyterian Church in Newark, N. J., were assailed by a lady in elegant attire, who severely horsewhipped them both. No clue to the identity of any of the parties was obtained.

Buying a Baby.

Great excitement has been occasioned in New Haven, Conn., by the fact that a woman recently delivered of a fine, healthy male infant, sold the baby for $10 to a rich family well-known in New York and up the Hudson river. It is understood that the child was purchased to play the part of an heir.

A Crazy Cook.

Suddenly and without any announcement, Katie Coffee, a colored cook employed by Mrs. M. Reynolds, on North Washington Square, near Fifth Avenue, gave a wild bloux-like whoop and bounded towards the ceiling in the parlor the other night.

Then she proceeded to chew the paper on the wall, pull up the carpet and tear down the ceiling. The family ran away terror-stricken, Mrs. Reynolds rushing out to get an officer.

Policeman McDermott went in and soothed Katie. Then he arrested her. She was held at Jefferson Market Court.

A WHOLESALE ELOPEMENT.

Long Branch gossipers have been startled by the sudden disappearance of Mr. Richard Wallace and Martin Dolan, and with them Miss Josephine White, a nineteen-year-old blonde, and Mrs. Martha Bolden, wife of Lewis Bolden, watchman of Hildreth's West End Hotel. Wallace, who is about thirty-five years old and rather good-looking, has a wife and family living at Keansburg, N. J. About six months ago he accepted a position at Mr. W. W. Conover's at Branchport, where he formed the acquaintance of Martin Dolan, an employee of Dodd's Express Company. Dolan was in the habit of visiting at the cottage of Mr. Bolden during his absence from the hotel. Wallace quite often accompanied Dolan upon his nightly visits, and was given the task of entertaining the pretty blonde, while Dolan entertained Bolden's wife. The intimacy soon ripened into love, and it appears that a scheme was entered into by which they were to get off and face the hardships of life together. Wallace soon told his friend of his intentions, and was surprised to hear that he also had been thinking of the same scheme.

One day last week Dolan, Mrs. Bolden and Miss White left for parts unknown, and on the following day Wallace, who had collected all the money owed him, was also missing. Nothing has been heard of them since. The expressman who took the trunks for the party says he got checks for Kansas City and thinks that is their destination.

A reporter who called upon Mrs. Wallace at her home, at Keansburg, found her confined to her bed from grief over her husband's doings. The attending physician said he had little hopes of saving her unless she rallies soon from her nervous prostration. To the inquiry as to what she intended doing she replied that the best thing she could do was to take her life, as she had no support for herself and her six small children. She had called on Mr. Bolden and found him suffering from the conduct of his wife. "He told me," continued Mrs. Wallace, "that he would either shoot himself or commit suicide in some other manner, as he could not stand the shame of his wife running away and leaving her children. If my husband does not return soon he will not find me alive," moaned the poor woman as the reporter left her.

Since Mrs. Wallace has been confined to her bed the family of small children have been dependent upon the eldest, who is about twelve years of age, for their wants and care. It is quite probable that the authorities will take steps to apprehend Wallace and compel him to return to his family.

ANOTHER AMERICAN GIRL SOLD.

Prince Colonna, who married Miss Mackay a year or less ago, has not only spent all he got, but gone already into debt. Now, as Miss Mackay is not Mr. Mackay's daughter, but Mrs. Mackay's by her first husband it will be interesting to know how long Mr. Mackay's benevolence will last. The poor little princess is neither pretty nor interesting, and it is not difficult to find a reason for the match, but one would think that Colonna might have had sufficient decency to make the fortune last at least two years and not come down on the parents until there was at least a baby to soften their hearts. Mrs. Mackay has gone to London to live. She has on the whole a social success in Paris, although she was never able to penetrate the sacred enclosure of the Faubourg St. Germain, but she will find the British haute noblesse more responsive to the clink of the American dollar.

We print this week an excellent portrait of Mr. Thomas Kearns proprietor of the famous road house which bears his name corner One Hundred and Thirty-second street and Seventh avenue New York.

STAGE WHISPERS.

"Polly" and her company had to foot it out of Newark. The fair Lillian's star is fading.

The McIntyre and Heath minstrels are to be reorganized, with Harry Clapham as manager.

Kate Forsythe is spoken of as leading woman for the stock company of the Temple, Philadelphia.

Annie Leslie has retired from the "Eag Baby" company playing in San Francisco, on account of illness.

A drama taken from Emil Zola's "Germinal" was interdicted in Paris lately because it reflected upon the efficiency of the police.

It is stated that John ("Hunk") Doris, of circus fame, will next season put a big specialty show on the road, headed by Frank Bush.

Now we have it that our own Mary Anderson has adopted the English trick of turning her toes in. This is abominable. Turn the rascals out.

Harrigan's new piece will be put on about Christmas. It has six new songs by Brahms, and Harrigan plays a lively and rattling Irishman in the piece.

Tony Hart and his "Buttons" company have thrown up the sponge. The illness of Mrs. Hart is given as a reason, but bad business had considerable to do with it.

Dan Maginness, of the old Boston Musical stock, and one of the best Major's in "Kitt" that the stage has seen, has just closed his third unsuccessful attempt at starring.

Topsy-Venn, who was brought over from London by E. E. Rice to paralyze the Yankees by her shape and "go," has, after repeated failures, drifted into Gus Williams' snap company.

This, from a "Frisco" correspondent, is calculated to create trouble. "Since the departure of Bartley Campbell it is said that Mary Paquita Mills has been introducing herself as Mrs. Campbell."

The Kiralfy Brothers' "Black Crook" and "Around the World in Eighty Days" companies are coling money everywhere this season. The pieces are being given with entirely new scenery and costumes.

"Have you seen the new star in the nebula of Andromeda?" asked one Quincy man of another, the other day. "Well—no, I haven't," responded the party addressed. "But I was up at Chicago the other day, and saw a snide company in 'Mikado.' At what time is 'Andromeda' to be given in Quincy?"

Dixey, of "Adonis" fame, lost $4,000 in election bets. He plunked down his money pluckily on Davenport at odds of two to one, and he lost it with-out a murmur. Next to Dixey, the heaviest bettor among theatrical people was Edward Gilmore. He also put up a good deal of money in support of his opinion that the Republicans would win.

It is said that Mrs. Langtry has injured her complexion by the use of cosmetics. Dealers in face powders who have been publishing the Lily's unsolicited testimonials in favor of their wares will be obliged to call them in and send out an entirely new set, from "a distinguished clergyman," for instance. There's nothing like a clergyman in the testimonial business.

Kall's "Health Journal" says: "Intense thirst is satiated by wading in water." Here is an idea theatrical managers should immediately act upon. Let them provide a pool of water in their respective houses of amusement for the benefit of the young men whose intense thirst drives them out between the acts. Managers should spare no expense to cater to the wants of their patrons.

Bertha Ricci, the charming soprano of McCaull's company is a pleasant little German woman and resides in New York city whenever her professional engagements do not interfere. She has two sisters, both of whom are on the operatic stage. Only one of the three appears under her proper name—Schumacker. Ricci is much dissatisfied with the part of Yvonne, because of the meagreness of the score allotted her.

Among the numerous feverish advertising romances making the rounds of the rural press is one to the effect that Mile. Rhea is waited upon by a deaf and dumb French girl, with whom she converses with her fingers. The fictions invented by press-agents are sometimes more amusing than truth. In point of fact, Rhea's attendant is a Russian girl, who converses fluently in Russian, French, German and English.

Do not forget that any person who is unable to buy this paper in their town can have it forwarded direct from this office at the rate of $1.00 for three months.

THIS WICKED WORLD.

A Few Samples of Man's Duplicity and Woman's Worse than Weakness.

Mrs. Charles Herman was brutally murdered by her husband, who, in a fit of jealousy, cut her throat with a razor at their home in Buffalo, N. Y. Herman has made a full confession of the crime, and gives as a reason his wife's unfaithful conduct with one Christ. Ziegel.

Judge Donohue is now considering the question of confirming or rejecting the report of the referee, Mr. Richard S. Newcombe, in favor of an absolute divorce to Alfred N. Beadelston, the well-known brewer, from his wife, Mary Elizabeth Beadelston. Mr. Beadelston, outside of his immense brewing interests, investments and income, is possessed of real estate worth over three-quarters of a million of dollars. Mrs. Beadelston is the daughter of a very wealthy lady, Mrs. Philippe, of Green's Farms, Conn., the widow of a prominent brewer. Mr. Beadelston is only about thirty-five years of age, resides in a magnificent mansion on West Fifty-second street, has a cottage at Lake George, and is head of the firm of Beadelston & Woerz, proprietors of the Empire Brewery. Mrs. Beadelston is two years his senior, is a very elegant lady in appearance and highly accomplished. The facts in the case, and the remarkable scenes and incidents, connected therewith are developed through the report of the court proceedings which follows. The stenographer's report of the evidence covers over three thousand and printed into pages—the result of sixty sessions, each lasting on an average between four and five hours. The immediate cause of the institution of the divorce proceedings was the accident of Mr. Bead-elston finding in the pocket of his wife's dress an unfinished letter.

This was in the latter part of December last. On the 6th of January Mrs. Beadelston left her home, going to her mother's at Green's Farms, Conn. Early in February Mr. Beadelston entered complaint in the Supreme Court in an action for absolute divorce. The case was sent to Mr. Richard S. Newcombe, law partner of the late Judge Cardozo, as referee to take the testimony. The hearing opened on the 12th of March. George F. Barlow appeared for Louis L. Jenkins, who was one of the persons with whom Mrs. Beadelston was alleged to have maintained intimate relations. Mr. Barlow was objected to unless he appeared as associate counsel for plaintiff. This would not be agreed to and he withdrew so far as appearing at the hearings was concerned. Mr. Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the plaintiff, opened the case before the referee. He said the parties to the suit were engaged to be married when the plaintiff was eighteen years and the defendant twenty-one. It was arranged that when Mr. Beadelston was twenty-one the marriage was to take place, and this agreement was carried out. Mr. Untermyer went on to say that Mr. Beadelston heaped luxury upon his wife and treated her with great confidence and liberality, permitting her to do as she pleased and gratifying her every wish. Not until last December did he suspect her. The revelation came by accident. Mr. Beadelston, counsel continued, has three children, Larry, aged fourteen, Emma, aged twelve, and Helen, aged four or five.

Mr. Beadelston has a summer residence at Lake George. The family resided there during the summer months. Mr. Beadelston would go up there on Friday nights and remain until the following Mondays, when he would return to the city to attend to his business. Regarding the letter found in her dress, it was intended for a young man named Jenkins, whom she met at Troy. She introduced him to Mr. Beadelston and the men became friends. This gave Jenkins an excuse for visiting her. But before the acquaintance with Jenkins, she knew a man named Young, a music teacher. Mr. Beadelston allowed her $1,000 a month to keep the house and pay the bills at Lake George. It would be proven that she was in the habit of ordering drinks—champagne, etc.—at the Lake House, Lake George, for herself and the music teacher, Young, and that she would have him remain with her until late at night, she sitting on his lap, hugging and kissing. Counsel further declared that she also maintained a connection with one Sherrell, clerk at the hotel, from 1877 till 1879, and that she invited him to her house in the city, received him there in the daytime when Mr. Beadelston would be absent, and made him valuable presents.

It might be stated that Sherrell was in the summers of 1877 and 1878. He stated that he resided at Sandy Hill, Washington county, N. Y., and was a cousin of Mrs. Tucker, the wife of the proprietor of the Lake House at Lake George. He went to the Lake House as clerk in June, 1877. Soon after his arrival he made the acquaintance of Mrs. Beadelston.

Sherrell then went on to answer the questions put to him. He said that about the 15th of June Mrs. Beadelston went to the desk in the office and laid down a book, remarking to him that there was something in there for him. He took up the book and found a note.

They often hugged and kissed.

It said, "If you dare take me out boat riding at night I will hug you to death." He went out that night on the lake with Mrs. Beadelston. He rowed to about the middle of the lake. There he stopped rowing, and they hugged and kissed each other. On an average this intimacy occurred once a day for the summer, and also the following summer, principally on the lake, in her room and in his. In the winter of 1877-78 he came to the city and stopped three weeks at the Beadelston city mansion. The intimacy referred to occurred every day during that time. In the summer of 1878 Mrs. Beadelston got to Lake George before the Lake House was opened in June, but he (Sherrell) was there. On an average there was intimacy between them every day till the close of the season.

When the season ended and Mrs. Beadelston returned to the city a correspondence was kept up between them. But when in the winter of '78 he called upon her in this city, she received him very coldly. He wondered what the matter was. She told him her husband was jealous and would kill her if she had anything more to do with him (Sherrell). "We then had some serious words," said witness. "She asked me what I was going to do—to try and see her when her husband had threatened to kill her? I said, 'No, he won't do it on my account.' I then took out four or five of her letters which I had in my pocket. She snatched two or three of them and threw them into the grate fire. I told her she need not snatch her letters; I had a lot of them down town at the Brandreth House and two large packages of them at Lake George. I went away and sent her by express about twenty letters of hers I had in my suitcase at the Brandreth House. I took a receipt from the expressman, but have not got it. I called at her house again and Nettie Lockheart said she was not in. He did not see her any more. Sherrell went on with his story to say that he knew a doctor who has a place at Lake George. The doctor and Mrs. Beadelston had seen together often. In the latter part of the summer of '78 she said to him (Sherrell) that he had got her in a fix and must help her out of it.

Miss Mary L. Tucker, daughter of the proprietor of the Lake House, testified that she came to New York with Mrs. Beadelston in the summer of 1884, and went with her to the office of Dr. Schley. She went on to relate that on one occasion she saw Sherrell catch Mrs. Beadelston by the throat and say: "You ——" Witness did not hear the remainder. He was very angry. This took place in the afternoon at the parlor door. There was nobody in the parlor except witness. Early in the summer, some time in July, Miss

She wanted to see him badly.

Tucker said she took music from the hotel to the Tucker cottage, where her family resided. She saw Mrs. Beadelston put her arms around Sherrell's neck as both sat together on the sofa. They remained in that position for about fifteen minutes or half an hour. This was in the private parlor of the Tucker cottage. Mrs. Beadelston appeared to be very jealous of Sherrell, and spent nearly all her time with him in the office, pretending to do fancy work and sometimes reading a book. One night Emma (Mrs. B.'s child) was very sick. Dr. Storm, of Glen's Falls, was sent for and was sitting up with the child, who was not expected to live. About 10 o'clock that night the witness went down stairs to the sitting-room, where there was a sofa. Mrs. Beadelston and Sherrell were sitting on this with their arms around each other. The room was dimly lighted from a light in the hall. On another occasion she saw Sherrell in Mrs. Beadelston's room. She was in bed and he was lying across the foot of the bed. When witness went in both colored up but said nothing. Sherrell immediately sat up. One day, when Sherrell was mad about something, she heard him say: "I don't care a — for Mrs. Beadelston or the money of all the Beadelstons on earth." Witness' mother heard him, and said to Mrs. Beadelston that she ought not to allow him to talk that way. Mrs. Beadelston replied: "Oh, I don't mind it, because, you know, when he gets mad he doesn't care what he says." Witness remembered Mrs. Beadelston going to Lake George about New Year's, 1879. She wanted to get her letters which Sherrell had said he had left there. Witness' mother promised to get her the letters if she would promise not to get into any more trouble of that kind. She took the letters from a bureau drawer in Sher-rell's room. They were done up in two packages and sealed with wax. One packet was labelled "Bills paid," and the other, "Bills unpaid." The packages were opened and found to contain her letters. She burned them in the coal stove in the sitting room, saying she was very glad she had found them. Mrs. Beadelston was with her on the visit, but did not know anything about the letters. Witness went on to tell of scenes and incidents between Mrs. Beadelston and August Young, a piano player at the hotel, in the summer of '81. Mrs. B. had a hammock beside her room window. She was lying in the hammock and Young was sitting on a chair beside her. On other occasions he saw them winking at each other in the parlor. Jenkins made his appearance in 1882. Mrs. Beadelston would go up to her room and Jenkins would follow. One evening Jenkins danced with a Mrs. Field, and Mrs. Beadelston was very jealous and would not speak to him. She danced with Capt. Denison. (This is the incident referred to by Mrs. Beadelston in her letter.) Witness had seen Mrs. B. and Jenkins in Jenkins' room. Once when witness found her there she said she did Mr. Jenkins' mending, and had gone in to see if he had any stockings, etc., that needed repair. She had often heard Mrs. B. calling him her darling.

Julia Gerry, now residing on East Ohio street, Chicago, testified she was a trained nurse and attended Mrs. Beadelston in her illness. She remained in her employment a year and a half. She was with her at Lake George during the season when the young piano player, August Young, came there. Mrs. Beadelston and Young got smiling at each other almost the first day they met. Inside of a week they were sitting together on the piazza, and then becoming more familiar they got into the private hallway leading to Mrs. Beadelston's room and finally into the room. Mrs. Beadelston would recline in her hammock on the piazza outside of her room and Young would sit on a chair beside her and look over sheets of music. Then

Mrs. Beadelston would treat to wine. In the evening Mrs. Beadelston and Young would sit down on the floor of the little hallway after he got through playing, about 11 o'clock at night. Sometimes there would be light, but more times none. Mrs. Beadelston would order crackers and cheese and champagne. This was before she saw Young in Mrs. Beadelston's room, and she did see him there several nights in succession. Mrs. Beadelston called the music master "Gus" and he called her "Mamie." If "Gus" did not come upstairs to the little hallway immediately after he had stopped playing in the parlor, Mrs. Beadelston would send Nettie Lockheart for him. Nettie was a confidential servant. Young would come upstairs and the party. Mrs. Beadelston, Nettie and witness, would form a little picnic party, and quating down upon the floor would drink their wine and eat their cheese and crackers like so many innocent little white mice.

They would remain there until 12 and 1 o'clock and sometimes 2 in the morning. The witness, however, was not in the habit of remaining there so late. The baby would not go to sleep without her and she had to look after the baby. Nettie would not remain there either. She had a beau of her own named Dan Levins and would go out with him to enjoy the moonlight. Witness had seen Young in Mrs. Beadelston's room at eleven o'clock at night. After this she saw him once, twice, three times a day in her room. Young always went to see Mrs. Beadelston after he got through playing, between half-past ten and eleven at night. He would remain with her until one and two o'clock. Every night Young came to the hall way and they had drink, sometimes champagne, other times milk punch, brandy, etc. She had seen Mrs. Beadelston kiss Young often, and she seemed to have or make no secret of it whatever. When Young would come to the room witness would get out, taking the baby, and Nettie would go off to talk with Dan Levins. Witness got fifteen dollars a week wages. She was a trained nurse. She recollected one day they went out on the lake, and Young was invited to go along. Mrs. Beadelston gave Nettie a dollar to pay Young's fare. Remembered a present that Mrs. Beadelston gave to Young. It was a gold scarf pin in the form of a dove with a diamond hanging from the bill. In their excursions Mrs. Beadelston would arrange things so as to look that Young was paying attentions to Nettie and not to herself. This was the case especially when they went buggy riding. Witness then gave a graphic description of the very pathetic parting scene between Mrs. Beadelston and Young when the latter was leaving Lake George for Saratoga. The omnibus was at the hotel door which was to meet the train. Mrs. Beadelston was so overcome at the thought of parting that she had taken to her bedroom. Young went there to bid her good bye. He remained there so long that the omnibus left and he had to go by Fort William Henry to catch the train. Witness went to Mrs. Beadelston's bedroom immediately after Young left. She was crying and trying to open the window so as to catch a last glimpse of him. The window would not open, and in her impatience she struck a pane of glass with a diamond ring she had on her finger and sent it shivering out on the walk. Witness said to her:

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself to be going on like that. You have a good husband, the father of your three children."

She replied: "Oh, Gus loves me better than Al., and I know it, too."

She felt very badly, never felt so badly when Mr. Beadelston was leaving.

Mrs. Gerry knew that a correspondence was kept up between them. There would be a couple of letters a day, and at night Young would telegraph: "Good-night, darling. I am well. How are you?" The telegrams and letters came in the name of Nettie Lockheart, so that people would not think that Mrs. Beadelston had anything in common in the affair. "Soon after Young left," witness said, "Mrs. Beadelston sought consolation in the companionship of the bartender, a young man named Armstrong. I saw him kiss Mrs. Beadelston often. Armstrong got discharged, and the day he left I saw him in Mrs. Beadelston's room. He was kissing and hugging her and saying, 'Good-bye, Mamie, dear.' He appeared to feel dreadful. Armstrong had drunk with Mrs. Beadelston in her bedroom. He would bring up wine and say: 'Well, Mamie, this is my treat now.' Witness then told how when Young played at a party in the house of Walter Price, next door to the Beadelstons, the pianos were placed back to back against the partition wall, and Mrs. Beadelston accompanied Young in his selections all the evening. Armstrong, the bartender, she said, called at Mrs. Beadelston's city residence on Fifty-second street. Mrs. Beadelston was not in to him. He called again and left a note. Mrs. Beadelston handed it to Mr. Beadelston, saying: 'Al, see the impertinence of these bartenders, asking to call.' That was the last I saw of Armstrong," observed the witness. The witness then mentioned two men named McCarty and Peter Bogert. She knew McCarty to call at the Lake House, and knew Bogert to have been given a box of handkerchiefs and a silk umbrella by Mrs. Beadelston. The cross-examination of Mrs. Gerry took up that session, but she stood it like a stone wall.

Henry C. Nichols, the clerk who succeeded Sherrell at the Lake House, told of the intimacy between Young and Mrs. Beadelston. He had known drinks to go to Mrs. Beadelston's room as late as midnight. Young would be there; and he had known Young to come from Mrs. Beadelston's room very late at night. Nichols also swore that he saw Mrs. Beadelston and Jenkins out on the piazza one night in their night clothes. They talked and laughed together and then went into the same room. He (witness) slept with his bedroom door open and heard them. Edward B. Irish, of Caldwell, was porter at the Lake House in 1881. He knew Sherrell, the clerk, and Cranall, the village blacksmith, and Jenkins and August Young. He had seen Mrs. Beadelston and the village blacksmith flirting with handkerchiefs. Mrs. Beadelston and Sherrell seemed to be quite intimate and went around together, boating, etc. He had seen on various occasions Sherrell and Young stealing on tiptoe to Mrs. Beadelston's room at night.

The Extraordinary Matrimonial Experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Loud.

An astounding story was told the other day in the divorce court before Judge Devens in the hearing of the contested case of Ellen G. Loud against Thomas J. Loud, of the firm of Loud Bros., well-known State street bankers. Mrs. Loud, who is not yet twenty-one years old, and is a remarkably handsome woman, was the first witness. She said:

"My name before marriage was Ellen G. Mack. I was married to Mr. Loud on May 28, 1881, at St. John's Episcopal Church in East Boston, and left him on June 12, 1882. Our wedding tour extended as far as New York, where we stayed at the Windsor Hotel. While there Mr. Loud kicked me out of the bed one night and threw me across the room. On our return to Boston we gave three receptions at the Revere House. On the night of the first reception, after the guests had retired and we had gone to our apartments, Mr. Loud said that I had committed a breach of etiquette in shaking hands with a gentleman. He became very angry, grasped me by the throat, threw me across a cot bed and choked me. I screamed, and my sister, Mrs. Dusenbury, came in and pulled him away. He then struck me a severe blow on the right breast, and I was unconscious two hours. When I came to I was in bed. I suffered greatly from the blow for several weeks. I consulted a physician, but did not tell of the cause of my suffering. One of the results of the blow was the formation of an abscess under my arm, which the doctor lanced. I have never recovered from the blow, and periodically suffer greatly, even now.

"The second reception was on June 24. My husband struck me a severe blow in the abdomen just before it, and I fainted dead away. After the first reception Mr. Loud struck me on the nose so hard that it made the blood flow. My father was present and interfered. The night of the third reception his treatment left marks on my limbs. I showed them to my sister. He forbade my going to see my father, and would not allow me to go when he was ill. Mr. Loud pinched my arms, making them black and blue, almost every day. Because I did not want to wear a low necked dress to the Tigers' ball Mr. Loud struck me a violent blow. My sister-in-law was present and saw the blow. One evening, at the Revere House, young Mr. Goodsell called on my sister. Mr. Loud opened some champagne and asked me to drink. I refused, and he threw the wine in my face. When I was sick I was locked in my room all day without anything to eat. He attempted at one time to empty a bottle of vitriol in my face. I screamed and my sister came in and took it away before he could get the cork out. He threatened me with a pistol. He struck me on the head before my mother. I was locked three times in the bath-room all night at the St. James Hotel because I would not comply with certain wishes of his. I was in my night clothes. I slept in the bath-tub. It was so cold that I shivered all night. The reason he gave my sister for locking me up was because I had disobeyed him, and he said that he should continue to punish me until I did as he wished. It was for this that I

"On Sunday following I went to his office and asked him to really insist on his proposition. He said he would give me a worse punishment than he had given me when I came home. I had taken his keys to get my clothes. I told him I never could go back to him. I cried and fell on my knees begging him not to compel me. His mother then came in. She and I were not on very good terms. She asked what was the matter. He told her, and she said to my husband, 'Why don't you strike her?' He then raised his hand and struck me across the face, knocking my hat off. I then rushed from the office almost insane and went to my sister, telling her I had left my husband. This was on June 12, 1882. I went to my mother's home and told her why I had done so. After I left him he wrote me two letters. One of them was very loving, but I knew it was from his pen and not from his heart. The other contained verses of poetry. Subsequent to June 12 I went to Europe with my father.

and remained a year. I have seen Mr. Loud since my return. He passed me by on the street without speaking. I have been supported by my father since then.

On cross-examination Mrs. Loud did not materially change her testimony, but she added other details of her husband's treatment of her. She said that before her marriage she took lessons in violin playing from Ole Bull. She continued, "When I was married my husband forbade my playing. One evening I picked up the violin, and he said he could not bear the scratching noise. I went from the room and played in the next room. He came in, saying he would smash it. He took it and threw it into the fire. On one occasion there were some friends invited by Mr. Loud to his rooms in the Revere House. My husband asked me to play. I had an abscess under my arm, which gave me great pain, and I said I could not hold the violin. Mr. Frank Loud took up the violin, and when I still refused to play, cut the strings with his pen knife. I cried, and my husband ordered me to my room, saying I was a baby. He frequently gave me what he called the Grecian bend kiss, which was performed by taking me by the arms and bending me backward and striking me with his knees. He did not want me to kiss my father. He said it was not proper for a married woman. He was very immodest in my presence. When I was ill I asked Mr. Loud for a physician. He refused, and said, more than once, that it was not proper for a married woman to have a physician. No one, except my sister, Mrs. Stewart, knew of his striking me a blow in the abdomen on the evening of the second reception. He kept me in the bath room four hours the first time. There was a window looking on to the street. I made no effort to arouse any one while I was locked in there. Neither did I make any effort on the two subsequent occasions, when I was locked in all night, to arouse any one. I weighed 128 pounds when I was married, and 90 pounds when I went to Europe.

E. B. Goodall, a lawyer, testified that he remembered the evening when Mr. Loud offered champagne to the company, Mrs. Loud refused the wine, and Mr. Loud said she must take it. Mrs. Loud then rose and withdrew from the room. At times Mr. Loud would be so affectionate as to make it noticeable. At other times he would treat her rudely. The witness had seen him pinch her, but couldn't say how hard. Mr. Loud had said that his wife would have to obey him. The witness did not see the glass of champagne thrown.

Mrs. Margaret R. Dusenbury, sister of Mrs. Loud, confirmed much of the libellant's testimony. She described the occurrence on the night after the first reception substantially as did Mrs. Loud.

"After I had placed Mrs. Loud in the bed," said the witness, "I also fainted away, and when I came to Mr. Loud was giving me some water." The witness also corroborated the evidence as to the occurrence just previous to the second reception, and said that Mrs. Loud was very sick after the third reception. "I saw

He strikes her across the face.

Mr. Loud throw the champagne in his wife's face," the witness continued. "I saw Mr. Loud with the revolver, and took it away from him. I saw Mr. Loud with the bottle of vitriol. He was holding his wife with one hand, and was trying to pull the cork with his teeth. Mr. Loud told his wife in June, 1882, to go home and stay until he sent for her. When the smallpox was bad Mr. Loud would not allow her to be vaccinated. Mrs. Loud came home on a Monday, and we went to Europe the next Saturday. We thought it was best to put oceans between them."

Loud for bruises on the breast and for an abscess under the arm.

Mrs. John Mack, sister-in-law of Mrs. Loud, testified to seeing Mr. Loud strike his wife in the stomach. Mrs. Loud at one time tried to take laudanum, and Mrs. Stewart took the bottle away. She said she would rather die than live with Mr. Loud.

SMILING MEN.

Two Groups Who Shared The Louisiana State Lottery Capital Prize.

Two-fifths of the capital prize of $75,000, won by ticket 15,291 in the Monthly Drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery last Tuesday, were sold in New Orleans. Messrs. Augustus Keivin, Lewis Hymel and A. O. Guillot, all of Algiers, were the joint possessors of one of the fifths, and a party of Louisville and Nashville Railroad bridge men of the other. The first party drew their money on Wednesday. A reporter was present at the time of payment, in the office of the Lottery Company. The three Algerines were in extremely good humor, and recalled with beaming satisfaction the trifling incident which induced them to invest in what turned out so well. On Sunday evening last the three, who are all mechanics of Algiers, were taking a little supper in the Acme saloon, on Royal street. Some one passing said, "The Lottery drawing comes off Tuesday." This gave the turn to a conversation which resulted in a joint investment in three fifths tickets, purchased at the Acme cigar stand. One of the fifths bore the figures 15,291. The party wanted another fifth of the same, but the dealer said he had already sold the other fifth. Mr. Keivin held the tickets, and thought little of the matter till Tuesday evening, when his eye was caught by the magic 15,291 opposite the capital prize, in an evening newspaper. He then notified his friends, and the three united in their descent upon the Company's check book Wednesday.

The check for $15,000 was handed over to Mr. Keivin in the presence of the reporter, and the three, richer each by $5,000, departed smiling from the bank.

A similar scene was repeated in the Lottery office Thursday, the good luck lighting this time the faces of the Louisville and Nashville bridge men. Their names are as follows: J. D. Hill, of Louisville, Ky. He is supervisor of bridges and buildings in the New Orleans and Mobile and a portion of the Mobile and Montgomery division of the L. and N. R. R., with headquarters at Bay St. Louis.

T. E. Powell, also of Louisville, bridge foreman. J. W. McCutcheon, of Pass Christian, track supervisor N. O. and M. division, L. and N. R. R. G. S. Hill, of Belmont, Bullitt county, Ky., bridge foreman of the N. O. and M. division, railroading for eleven years.

J. G. Broshear, of Bardstown Junction, Bullitt county, Ky., bridge-man for two years.

As the three first named of these sat waiting for the $15,000 check, they told the reporter how it was. They had made a pool in September, and bought fifteen one-fifth tickets for the drawing that month, getting an approximation prize of $5. They concluded to try it again, and on Friday last bought another batch of fifteen one-fifth tickets at the Acme saloon. The first one to see the lucky result was Mr. Powell, while reading the Times-Democrat in Bay St. Louis, Wednesday morning. He let the others know by the wires, and the three dropped over Thursday to materialize for the combination. They went away $3,000 richer each, and say they will hit the wheel again if luck holds out.

These five men are known all along the line of the Louisville and Nashville, from New Orleans to Cincinnati, and they won't hear the last of their congratulations for some time to come.—N. O. Times-Democrat, Oct. 17.

SHERIDAN AND THE DUDE.

The newest kink in amateur military life in New York is a company of cavalry called the Hussars. Heretofore the mounted militiamen of New York, aside from the staffs, have been mostly butchers, grocers and cartmen, and others who use horses in their work and utilize the beasts for pageantry on holidays. But the Hussars are elaborately fashionable. This is the body that drew attention to itself, on its organization by blackballing several Jewish young beaux. The proclaimed intention is to form the most elegant corps known to soldiery. The recruits have put themselves under the tuition of the most celebrated equestrian master in the city, as well as employing a regular army officer to drill them, and the outcome is expected to be something truly beautiful. Well, Gen. Sheridan was standing in a group of acquaintances when a dandy of the thinnest pattern approached him. The make-up of the young-chap was exquisite, and he doubted not that his social superlatives ty was so manifest as to be impressive to anybody. He plucked little Phil daintily by the arm.

"May I speak to you a moment?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," was the careless reply.

"I have joined the Hussars, General, and I take a great interest in the organization, you know. Now, you're rather famous, don't you know, as a cavalry rider, and what I thought was that your presence at one of our drills, you see, would be a good thing for the boys. Could you oblige us? I'm sure the fellows would make it pleasant for you—no end of champagne and that sort of thing—and if you could make yourself feel like riding a round or two it would be vastly appreciated."

"Is there a ring, with sawdust?"

"We use a riding school ring, but I think it is not sawdust. Why do you ask?"

"Because I imagined you might desire me to stand on my head, or turn somersaults, or amuse the boys by some clowning. Only let me know just what you want, and don't forget the champagne."

PUGILISTIC NEWS.

A Close and Accurate Resume of the Arenic Events of the Week.

John H. Clark has opened the Club Theatre, Philadelphia, again, and boxing matches will again be allowed.

"Pittsburgh Bill" and William Bradburn, of Chicago, are to fight within 100 miles of Pittsburgh within a week.

Harry Gilmore has challenged Sam Bittle, of Toronto, and Johnny Cash, of Montreal, to box with hard gloves for $500 a side.

"Thumby" Evans, who is coming to the United States, has had a farewell dinner in Birmingham at the George and Dragon Inn.

John L. Sullivan says he will sail from San Francisco for Australia next April. He will be managed by John E. Cannon of New York.

Jerry Murphy, Jimmy Kelly and their combination company recently appeared at the Alhambra, Kingston-upon-Hull, Eng., and made a great hit.

The law in Minnesota against prize-fighting goes into effect January 1. It includes pugilists, trainers, backers and stakeholders in its penalties.

The diamond belt for the heavy-weight championship of the Pacific slope, given by Harry Maynard, will be contested for in San Francisco on Dec. 21.

One or two more glove fights like the Bittle and Cash glove contest at Toronto, will give boxing, which is becoming very popular in Canada, a black eye.

Tom Henry is training Al. Powers for his glove contest with Jack Fallon, which is to take place within 50 miles of this city on Nov. 26. Denney Butler is training Fallon.

Spencer, the English pedestrian, who is now more than sixty years old, has just walked 6,000 miles in 110 days. He should join in the O'Leary and Weston 2,500 mile walking contest.

Jack Burgess and Dennis Butler, both of Brooklyn, have signed articles of agreement to spar with gloves, Queensbury rules, to a finish, for $250 a side on Dec. 15, within 20 miles of New York.

Leather and Allen are coining money by their great attraction, John L. Sullivan. Every time the champion appears he receives great applause, and he is just as popular as ever. Sullivan is taking the best of care of himself.

Jim Smith, the English pugilist, who desires to come to this country, wants a haul of money to make the trip. He wants a salary of $50 per week and half the gross receipts of all exhibitions. Jim Macneil must have been tutoring Smith.

Jack Davis, Jim Macneil's unknown, who met Mike Donovan, of Brooklyn, at the American Institute, is now looked upon as one of the best heavy-weights in England. Davis is out with a challenge to meet any man in England, and Jim Macneil is behind him. Davis must have either greatly improved since he met Donovan, or else the stock in England cannot amount to much.

Charley Mitchell cannot be flourishing. He wants Billy Madden to again manage his affairs. At the time Madden managed Mitchell's affairs, Mr. Charles wanted one end and the middle, and when Madden protested he said he could manage himself and Madden allowed him to do so. Madden has just as big an attraction as Charley Mitchell in Jack Ashton, for no pugilist resigns a star unless he agrees to meet all comers, and Mitchell lost caste when he refused to fight Jack Dempsey, who challenged him when he was on the Pacific Coast.

Dodge City, Kan., is one of the best places in the United States to bring off a first-class mill. At the recent glove fight between Smith and Clow on the Fair Grounds all the leading officials were present and enjoyed the affair. Batt Masterson, the popular sporting man, whose portrait lately appeared in this paper, had the management of the affair. Masterson says if Richard K. Fox will send him the "Police Gazette" diamond belt and put up a purse of $5,000 he will guarantee to bring off a mill between John L. Sullivan and Paddy Ryan or Sullivan and McCaffrey.

Sporting circles in San Francisco are agitated over a glove contest for $500 a side and gate receipts that has been arranged between Jack Burke and Mike Cleary. The affair is to be decided at San Francisco, Cal., on the 24th of the present month. Since Cleary has arrived on the Pacific coast he has made a host of friends, and they will use all their influence and money to assist him to conquer the Irish lad. Considerable interest is manifested over the affair, and the day they meet there will be considerable money wagered on the result. Burke has not caught on with the sporting men of the Pacific slope and the judges of pugilism have not a very high opinion of his abilities as a pugilist. They claim that he is a clever, scientific boxer but that his blows lack force. Burke met Cleary in a 4-round glove contest in this city which ended in a draw, although at the time Burke had a shade the best of the points. Cleary will be in condition this time and if he has the fortune to land that terrific right he may serve Burke with the same sauce he gave Jim Good at Chicago, and the double dose he gave Wm. Sheriff, the Prussian, who he knocked out in this city, also in quicker time at Philadelphia.

There is every indication of a glove contest for $1,000 being arranged between Jack Ashton, Billy Madden's champion, and Jim Donnelly, of Patterson, N. J., who engaged in a glove contest in this city on Nov. 13. On Nov. 14 Donnelly, with John Hogan, his trainer, and J. T. Brett, his backer, called at the Police Gazette office, posted $500 for the fight, and left the following challenge:

To the Sporting Editor:
Not being satisfied with the result of the glove contest between Jack Ashton and Jim Donnelly, fought at Germania Assembly Rooms of Nov. 13, and understanding that Ashton and his backer, Billy Madden, are eager to arrange a match, please state in your valuable journal that I am prepared to back Donnelly to meet Ashton in the twenty-four-foot ring with or without gloves, either according to "Police Gazette" or London prize ring rules six weeks from signing articles for $500 or $1,000 a side. To prove I am in earnest and mean business I have this day deposited $500 for the fight with Richard K. Fox, who shall be final stakeholder. If this proposition suits Billy Madden and his second John L. Sullivan he can cover my money, name a time of meeting at the Police Gazette office, and Donnelly and myself will come from Patterson and arrange a match.

The backer of Donnelly is confident he can conquer Ashton, and if Madden covers the forfeit, posted a match will certainly be made.

About 500 patrons of boxing attended the glove contest between Jim Donnelly, of Patterson and Jack Ashton, of this city, formerly of Providence, at Germania Assembly Rooms, on Nov. 13. It was announced that the men should box according to Queensbury rules and on their merits, but the affair had been so well advertised that the police were present in force, and Billy Madden, who managed the affair, announced that the men would only box for points. The announcement threw a damper on the affair, for many came a long way to witness what they expected would be an out and out first-class boxing match. Donnelly is a strapping, well-proportioned athlete, who works daily in Patterson, and he was certain that he could defeat not only Madden's new champion, but any pugilist his weight. A large delegation came from the land of clam catchers to witness Donnelly perform, and Newark, Jersey City and Paterson were well represented. Ashton is a more compact and stouter built man than Donnelly, and after he has had more experience and training under Madden's tuition, he will make a champion, that is if he has the stamina and is thoroughly game. After several first-class boxing bouts by the local talent, Ashton and Donnelly entered the arena, at which was erected at the end of the hall. Bob Smith and Jack Hogan were behind the Patterson champion, while Tommy Campbell seconded Ashton. Four rounds were fought but the contest lost all interest owing to the fact that no rules governed, and the rounds lasted one minute, two minutes, one minute and thirty seconds, and one minute. Donnelly landed several times on Ashton with both hands, but the latter had decided the best of the encounter during the short time it lasted. In the last round both went near the ropes and the contest was brought to an abrupt conclusion. Donnelly's both eyes were discolored during the short time the encounter lasted, and Ashton also exhibited marks of the fray. Neither party was satished with the result of the contest, and it is probable the rivals will be matched for a fair-sized stake, to battle with or without gloves. Madden has a standing challenge, in which he is ready to match Ashton, and the debt is backed up with a forfeit which only needs to be covered to ensure a match. It is impossible to form any opinion of Ashton's pugilistic abilities by his "meet" with Donnelly for two reasons: He was handicapped by no rules governing the contest and Donnelly continually hugged him, not having any one to advise or coach him; while, on the other hand, he was afraid of forcing the fighting and assuming the offensive with a spirit of determination because the police threatened to arrest both principals if they fought in earnest. Ashton is matched to meet Donnelly, who, by the way, is a clever boxer and has conquered more pugilists than have conquered him, and if the match is not stopped by the police a better idea can be formed of Ashton when he faces the burly, good-natured boxer from Brooklyn.

The following are the particular results of the glove contest between Sam Bittle and John Cash, fought recently at Albert Hall, Toronto, according to "Police Gazette" revised Queensbury rules.
Round 1.—Cash led out and tapped Bittle in the stomach, and the latter, endeavoring to counter, forced his opponent against the wall. A little more feinting and dodging, and then Bittle jabbed Cash in the stomach, and in return received a slight blow on the cheek. Bittle then let out with right and left in quick succession, but fell short as Cash stepped out of harm's way. These maneuvers were followed by a little fighting at close quarters, a clinch and a break without any damage having been done. The contestants tripped the light fantastic toe-and-heel for a few seconds, and then Cash connected his left glove with Bittle's jaw and the latter countered on Cash's chin. Time was called.

Round 2.—Bittle was evidently anxious to force the fighting, but Cash was satisfied to keep out of the way. The latter danced around Bittle for a while, taking care to remain out of reach of his arm. Bittle followed the Montreal man all around the stage, but was persistently avoided. Finally a couple of face blows were exchanged, but they were light and left no mark. Another terpid-chorean display was witnessed, and feinting and dodging, for no apparent purpose except to kill time, was indulged in for a few moments longer. At length Cash received a dig in the ribs which moment later proved to be easy. Cash tried to reach Bittle's face, but did not go far enough. Bittle made a similar attempt on Cash's features, but the blow was cleverly parried. A very time round was then closed.

Round 3.—Cash delivered his left heavily on Bittle's jaw. Bittle failed to counter, but a little later succeeded in reaching his opponent's temple. Following up this success he rattled the Montrealer's teeth by a rap on the chin. A rapid exchange of blows on head, neck, and body ensued, and then careful sparring filled out the rest of the round.

Round 4.—Cash resumed his defensive tactics, and either kept out of Bittle's reach or waited for him to lead. The crowd yelled encouragement to Bittle, and urged him to "give it" to the visitor, and suggested that he should "chew him up." One individual was kind enough to warn the Toronto man that he might catch small-pox from the Montrealer. At length Bittle caught on to Cash's cheek, and received in return a counter on the eye. Once more Cash, who was bleeding slightly from the nose, received a tap on the wind-bag, a smile on the cheek, and before the round was closed Bittle's left had again visited his stomach. The round was decidedly in Bittle's favor.

Round 5.—Cash delivered his right with great force into the most susceptible part of Bittle's body, nearly doubling the young man up. This was the first severe blow that Cash had landed. An inter-hinge of blows at close quarters followed, but when the break and time was called no further harm had been done.

Round 6.—Cash now assumed the role of which he had hitherto allowed to Bittle and forced the fighting to the close. Many heavy blows were exchanged, but the only knock-down was scored by the Montrealer. The crowd became very much excited, and the shouting and cheering made a very pandemonium of the hall. Many of the spectators tried to stand on the backs of the seats in order to obtain a better view of the stage, and several of the benches refused to bear the weight and came down with a crash beneath it. When time was called the referee came forward and declared the fight a draw, a decision that was received with marked disfavor. Cash also spoke a few words, declaring that he did not expect a welcome in Toronto. No doubt the decision of the referee was a correct one. Bittle led up to the close of the fifth round, but in the sixth Cash obtained an advantage which brought him about even. The contest was a very tame one. James Lennon was referee.

The New York Athletic Club, famous for the promotion of all athletic sports since its infancy, which dates back to 1867, gave a first-class athletic exhibition at its elegant and well-equipped gymnasium in this city on Nov. 12. The main attraction was a glove contest between the now popular exponents of the manly art, Dennis Butler, of Brooklyn, and Joe Denning, who also resides in the Eastern District of the City of Churches. Butler is not only a pugilist but a champion swimmer, and is very popular. He stands 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighs 168 pounds. Joe Denning appeared soon afterward. He is 5 feet 8 1/2 inches tall and weighed 160 pounds, being out of condition. Jimmy seconded Denning, while Jack Fallon, who is matched to "box" Al. Powers, of Greenpoint, seconded Butler. It had been decided by the committee of arrangements that the men should box 6 rounds, according to "Police Gazette" rules, which are a great improvement on Queensbury rules. In the first round both displayed considerable science, but in the second they fought with great earnestness. Butler opened the round by getting in a heavy face, and Denning retaliated with a swinging right-hander on the forehead. Butler then got in several good blows on the nose, chest and jaw. The latter blow, added by a back-heel, sent Denning to the floor. When he attempted to get up Butler struck him on the neck. This blow, which was foul, did not have sufficient steam in it to knock out the Greenpoint athlete, and was not claimed as a foul. Denning then struck Butler heavily on the face and head. Very little work was done in the third round, Butler scoring the most points, however. In the fourth round they grew anxious to finish the battle, and Butler rushed, Denning to the ropes by planting heavy face and body blows. The fifth round saw Denning go to the floor again, he being back-heeled by Butler for the second time. Denning's nose was then twice its natural size and was bleeding copiously. Butler's left eye was swelled and turning mouse color. In the sixth round and last, Denning attempted to knock out Butler. He rushed savagely at him and planted his left on the mouth and right on the jaw, being countered on the nose and face by Butler's left. Butler, too, tried the knocking-out tactics, and swung his right on his opponent's jaw. They then rushed at each other. Right and left hands shot out, and Butler, with his superior reach, got home the greatest number of blows. He drove Denning back step by step, and finally got him on the ropes and fought gamely until time was called. Then it was decided that the event was a draw. Previous to their meeting several events were decided according to Queensbury rules. The boxers were on their mettle, and while their encounters were not gory they were marked by hard hitting and in some cases blood was drawn. The first pair to put on the gloves were J. Kenny and J. J. Kerns, two feather weights from the Pastime Club. Kenny, who is a miniature of Jack Burke, was very effective, and planted heavy blows on the face and head of his opponent. Then Tom Henry, who defeated Jimmy Murray in a battle at Pelham Bridge met Al. Powers. Powers is a messenger at the Stock Exchange, and the Wall Street members encouraged him. He fought well, but Henry was too scientific for him. Willie Haas and J. Flanagan, bantam weights, followed. A catch-as-catch-can wrestling match between J. J. O'Brien and J. Quinn evoked much applause. Each won one fall and they retired. J. McMahon, who won Billy Madden's light-weight championship tourney, then pounded Mike Regan out of shape. They fought savagely, and in the first round McMahon fought Regan down into his corner and later through the ropes. They fell together in the third round and were prevented fighting further by Waldo Sprague, the master of ceremonies. Then Joe and Willie Killingsworth had a brotherly tapping match.

Among the others present were A. V. De Goleouris, Nestor De Goleouris, Eddie Hudson, C. I. Hudson, A. H. Wheeler, Thos. F. Ryan, A. P. Morgan, H. B. Fielding, W. G. George, the English runner; A. H. Bruce, of Kentucky, secretary and treasurer. Racing rules were amended in several particulars, and it was decided to license jockeys. One of the principal changes in the rules was one which makes it impossible for any one interested in any of the horses in the races to act as a judge, and that a horse shall not be considered a starter for the purpose of settling bets until he is actually in the hands of the starter. The fixing of dates for the different spring and fall meetings was not accomplished, as no satisfactory arrangements could be reached.

THE REFEREE.

His Thoughts, Opinions and Expressions on Matters of Sporting Interest.

It is my opinion a glove contest between pugilists of note is always a first-class sporting attraction, and a paying one, but the public when they pay to witness these affairs do not want to witness a fiasco or a fizzle.

The public do not make their livelihood by the pugilists, the latter make their living by the public patronage; therefore, it is their own fault if they kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Since the well-contested glove contest at Albert Hall, Toronto, between John F. Scholtes, the champion pugilist and all-round athlete, of Canada, boxing has been greatly revived, because the meeting was properly managed and the contest was a genuine one, and nearly every exhibition has been well patronized.

It is generally the case that the pugilistic brigade cannot stand properly, and it looks that way in Canada, for the patrons of boxing in Toronto have had a dose of alleged boxing which will not by any means increase the reputation of the parties or promote this vigorous healthful recreation.

I have reference to the alleged boxing match on Nov. 2nd between Sam Bittle, of Toronto, and Johnny Cash, of Montreal.

It was advertised far and wide that these pugilists were to contend for the supremacy, and the conflicting public filled the large hall.

The contest was one of the most successful fixtures of the season, and a disgraceful one.

Cash, during the 6 rounds, spent one-half his time getting out of Bittle's way and the other half in entreating with his eyes the timekeeper to call "time."

The audience, when not hooting or hissing, were falling over the benches, which was the most interesting part of the entertainment. Cash at the finish made a speech in the words: "I didn't expect any better in Toronto." No one who makes such a poor show with his fists as Cash, has a right to expect anything but a good drubbing, and Bittle can do him up without any trouble. In giving his decision as to points, the referee-gazed solemnly for a moment at Cash's closed eyes, and then drew out "a draw." The audience smashed a few more benches into kindling wood and then retired.

John L. Sullivan still means to be the King pin in the pugilistic world. In a recent interview he said: "There is no money in training and fighting for $2,500 a side, and I don't believe there is over one pugilist in the world that could find backers to find that amount if I agreed to fight them. Let some sporting man produce a pugilist to match against me for $5,000 or $10,000 a side to fight with small gloves, so that I will not run the risk of going to the penitentiary, then the sporting public will find out who is the champion."

Daniel O'Leary and A. F. Weston, I understand, have arranged an endurance walking match, and they have signed articles to walk 2,500 miles for a purse of $3,000.

They propose to walk in skating rinks and covered enclosures throughout the country, walking 12 consecutive hours a day, omitting Sundays, until the entire distance (2,500 miles) has been traversed.

I understand an official scorer will be appointed to follow the contestants, and it is estimated that the long journey will be completed in from 48 to 50 days.

The contestant who first completes the distance is to take $3,000 of the purse and two-thirds of the net gate receipts, and the loser is to take what remains.

The journey will probably be begun on December 7, but it is not yet definitely settled where the great race shall commence.

I should suggest that the start should take place in New York city; and if C. C. McClellan, of Boston, the manager of the affair, wants a pointer, he should name this city for the starting point.

I think the race will be watched with great interest and create quite a revival in the pedestrianism line.

One thing is certain, many will back Weston to beat O'Leary although the latter has conquered him on three different occasions in Chicago, London, Eng., and San Francisco, but it must be remembered that those races were six-day contests and on each occasion Weston was in the best condition at the finish of each race.

It is my opinion if the races had been continued on the seventh day Weston would have beaten O'Leary.

I understand another scheme is on foot to make new billiard rules and to introduce a new game of billiards.

It is my opinion there are enough of rules and different styles of games already without any more.

It is my opinion too many rules regarding one game only paralyze both the patrons and those who participate in such affairs, while they do not in any way promote billiards or any other contests, but rather help to complicate and confuse them.

In the ordinary three-ball carrom game a count is made if the cue-ball hits both object balls upon any portion of the table, so that, should a player get the balls "upon the rail," he might carry them along the cushion for an "indefinite" length of time, provided he was a skilful player, counting each time he made a stroke.

In the 14-inch ball line game chalk lines are drawn upon the cloth from end to end and from side to side of the table, 14 inches at all points from the cushion, thus forming eight squares by the crossing of the lines.

When the balls are in one of these spaces but two points can be counted, it being required that the second shall drive at least one of the balls out of the space.

Should the ball be driven across the table and return into the space again from the opposite cushion, then another point may be counted in the space, but the next shot must drive the ball out again, as failure to do so will end the striker's half of the inning.

I think it will be seen that, as the balls have of necessity to be kept moving about the table in open table play, the game is much more difficult and brilliant than the old style straight rail, which permits a player to nurse anywhere from 500 to 1,000 points out of a trio of ivory balls before missing, and in play that allows of no brilliant execution.

I think the "Police Gazette" champion club has proved a bonanza for Matsuda Sorakichi, the Japanese champion wrestler. He has been engaged to appear in Boston for two weeks to put up the 220-pound club, for which he receives $100 per week.

I now find out that the followers of the French horse, Pilsaeterie, who won what our English cousins term the double event the Cesarewitch and Cambridgehire, won nearly three times the amount I recently announced.

The London "Sporting Life" says: "It is astounding but nevertheless true, that £100,000 was taken out of English pockets by French turfmen who backed Pilsaeterie for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgehire."

Race riders are not always impetuous. McLaughlin, the rider of Miss Woodford in the recent race, is worth $100,000 and is paid $10,000 a year by the Dwyers to ride.

In the olden time the prize paid the riders was light compared to what the popular whips now get. Oliphant received but $500 for riding Lexington in the two famous runs at New Orleans—the one in which Lecompte defeated him by 4 miles, and the other when the famed old white horse battled with time and reduced the record.

For his trip to Europe, to ride Ten Broeck's horses, Oliphant received but $2,000 and expenses. The fellow was a spendthrift, though, and however much he received he would waste it.

Murphy, the colored boy, who rides for Ed. Corrigan, and who piloted Fordland to the greatest victory of the year, receives $5,000 and a percentage of the wintage.

It is my opinion many horses are ruined and made lame by careless shoeing.

If owners and horsemen are anxious to do something useful at a small expense, let them publish an illustrated broadside, fit for hanging in blacksmith shops, telling smiths and their bosses what not to do.

"Don't carve the frog; don't open the heels; don't rasp the outside of the hoof; don't cut the hoof to fit the shoe, but after shoeing the toe, if needed, fit the shoe to the foot," and so on, as common sense dictates.

Now that the baseball season is virtually over and the fever of the national game has time to look over the result of the past season's work, the points in which the individual players excel are becoming manifest.

For instance, were it possible to get together all the players who excel in their respective fielding positions and form a crack nine, the following would be the composition of the club:

On the other hand, from the average of the players it appears that the best batting nine would be: Rowe, catcher; Ferguson, pitcher; Glascock, short stop; Connor, first base; Richardson, of Buffalo, second base; Sutton, third base; Dalrymple, left field; O'Rourke, center field; Dorgan, of New York, right field.

I understand that at the fall meeting of the baseball league the association will adopt "the hit by pitched" rule, and that the American Association will abolish the base on ball rule.

I think this will make the playing rules uniform, except that the League pitchers will have but six and the Association pitchers seven chances at a batsman.

The League will settle the admission fee trouble in its midst by adopting the American Association plan of guarantees only to the visiting club. Then each club can charge what it likes and will rely for support on its home patronage.

I understand that clubs favor a 35-cent admission fee, and three—Boston, New York and Chicago—hold out for the present League rate, 50 cents. The rules against liquor selling and Sunday games will also be quietly removed, if indeed they have not already gone.

In a recent issue of the London "Field" appeared a communication from Mr. Tankerville Chamberlayne, the owner of the cutter Arrow, which beat the America in the race for the Queen's cup in 1882.

He wants to sail his old cutter against any American yacht for the trophy which he claims is now held by the Arrow. Mr. Chamberlayne is of the opinion that the cutter Arrow would be on more equitable terms when sailing against an American yacht than she would be if pitted against the modern British racing craft.

He includes the following conditions in his offer: "1. The challenging yacht must be a cutter or a sloop. 2. The boat out of three races over the Queen's Cup course, at Cowes, to determine the contest. 3. Six months' notice to be given to me. I ask for this because I should have to do so much to my old cutter to make her fit to compete with a modern flyer. If any American brother yachtsman will honor me with a reply I shall be delighted to hear from him at my home, Cranberry Park, near Winchester."

The America's Cup has been and still is called by persons not well informed the "Queen's Cup," but, in point of fact, the old schooner, while under American management, never sailed for a "Queen's Cup" at all.

She was entered for a "Queen's Cup" on the day succeeding that on which she won her famous race, but the weather not being sultry and fit for sailing, on the morning of that day she did not start with the other yachts, although she went out afterwards and beat them all over the course.

Failing to obtain a match for her the owners of the America sold her to Mr. John de Biquiere for £5,000, and the succeeding year, 1883, he started her in a race for the Queen's Cup, which was won by the Arrow. The America in this race was under British rig and British management.

The capacity of an ordinary horse's stomach is about sixteen quarts, yet many a farmer will not hesitate to administer eight quarts of oats at a dose and then immediately supplement this with all the good fresh hay he can induce the horse to swallow.

Such feeding can only result in one way. The grain, the best part of the horse's feed, is forced out of the stomach before it is half digested, and its place is taken by the less nutritious portion of his diet.

A horse treated in this way if he happens to have a good appetite is apt to be reckoned a "glutton" and a horse whose feed appears to do him no good.

He is not allowed time to digest his food and of course it cannot do him much good.

Through irregular work and overwork his digestive organs in time become seriously impeded and what I have quoted above becomes true of him, but with proper feeding such a misfortune would never have befallen him.

Had he been allowed time to digest his grain before the hay was given him, he would have received the full benefit of the eight quarts of oats, and at the proper time, the hay would have been useful instead of detrimental to him.

Another serious blunder which farmers often make in feeding their horses is that of crowding the hay-rack or manger full of hay every time the horse is to be fed.

By this practice the hay becomes impregnated with the horse's breath, and consequently unwholesome and unstable.

Another mistake is to feed a horse heavily when he is fatigued. Most people think that so matter how tired a horse happens to be he may be fed a liberal ration of grain, so long as he is not too warm.

This is a very grave error and results in the almost total destruction of many valuable animals every year. A tired horse is no more fit to digest a heavy feed of grain than a warm horse.

The additions to these lists last season were as follows: Three to the three-year-olds thirteen to the four-year-olds, and twenty to the five-year-olds. The total number of horses that have beaten 2:30 before or in their five-year-old form foots up 300.

R. A., Newtown, Conn.—The prize fight between Jim Dillon and Bob Travers was fought Aug. 11, 1883, at Twyford Station, England. The battle was stopped by the police after the pugilists had fought 20 rounds in 1 hour 46 minutes and 36 seconds. The referee ordered the pugilists to go to Oxfordshire and a ring was pitched at Wargrave Ferry. Fifty-three more rounds were fought in 3 hours and 7 minutes, when the police again appeared. The referee ordered the pugilists to go back again to Twyford where another ring was pitched. Dillon was present and entered the enclosure, but Travers failed to appear and Dillon was declared the winner, and on the day following received the stakes.

R. W. G., Washington, D. C.—The yacht race for the Cape May challenge cup, valued at $1,000, and presented by James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, in 1873, commenced on Sept. 27, 1885, by the American schooner Dauntless, Caldwell W. Colt, owner, and the English cutter Genesta, owned by Sir Richard Sutton. The start was made from an imaginary line between the judges' boat and buoy No. 5, off Sandy Hook, about 4 o'clock Sept. 27, and the course was southerly and around the Five-fathom lightship off Cape May and return to the Sandy Hook lightship. The Dauntless had her owner as sailing-master and had ex-Commodore E. E. Chase, of the New York Yacht Club, and several other gentlemen on board. The Genesta was superintended by J. Beaver Webb, and among her guests were Arthur Padelford and Col. Fred May. The Genesta won, the Dauntless being dismasted.

D. C., Georgetown, D. C.—Henry Pearce succeeded Jim Belcher to the championship of England. Pearce was born in Bristol, Eng. in 1777. He stood 5 feet 9 inches in height and weighed 162 pounds in condition. His first battle took place August 11, 1805, and in which he conquered Bourke. In 1804 it was generally considered that Jim Belcher had retired from the ring and that the belt was therefore vacant and Pearce assumed the title of champion. Bourke again challenged Pearce, and a match was made for £100 (£500), 200 (£400) for the winner and £10 (£50) for the loser. Pearce again being victorious. This was fought January 23, 1804. His next opponent was Elias Spray, for 50 guineas, March 11, 1805. Pearce again won in 29 rounds in 35 minutes. His next fight was with Cart of Birmingham for 50 guineas, April 27, 1805. Pearce again won in 25 rounds, occupying 35 minutes. John Gully was Pearce's next adversary, and a match was made, the backers of Pearce laying 600 hundred guineas against 400 guineas. The fight came off October 8, 1805. Pearce won. His last battle was with Jim Belcher for 500 guineas, December 6, 1806. Pearce again being victorious in 18 rounds lasting 35 minutes.

D. H., Georgetown, D. C.—The following are the best records at glass-ball shooting: Three hundred glass balls broken in succession by A. H. Bogardus, at Lincoln, Ill., on July 4, 1877; 500 glass balls broken in 24 minutes 2 seconds by J. J. O. Hasbelle, Lynn, Mass., May 30, 1881. He shot at 514, thrown from two traps, 14 yards rise, 12 feet apart; 600 glass balls broken by A. H. Bogardus, at Bradford, Pa., Nov. 20, 1879. He shot at 1,000 from three traps, 14 yards apart; 1,000 glass balls were broken in 1 hour 1 minute 34 seconds by A. H. Bogardus, at New York City, Dec. 20, 1879. The two traps were placed 15 yards apart, 15 yards rise, and he loaded his own gun and changed the barrels at the end of every hundred, 1,500 glass balls in 1 hour 37 minutes 20 seconds, 2,000 in 2 hours 16 minutes 48 seconds, 3,000 in 3 hours 24 minutes 40 seconds, 4,000 in 4 hours 48 minutes 48 seconds; 5,500 in 5 hours 37 minutes 46 seconds; 5,000 in 6 hours 22 minutes 30 seconds; 5,500 in 7 hours 19 minutes 2 seconds, out of 5,854, shot at by A. H. Bogardus, at New York City, Dec. 20, 1879. The above records from 1,500 were shot at 15 yards' rise, two traps, 12 feet apart; 5,000 out of 6,222 glass balls were broken by Dr. W. E. Carver, at Brooklyn, N. Y., July 13, 1878. He used Winchester rifles and was assisted in loading.

B. S., Chicago, Ill.—1. Peter Morris, the feather-weight champion of England died at Birmingham, Eng., Oct. 15, 1873. 2. He broke a blood vessel coughing. 3. Peter Morris was born at Birmingham, Eng., Aug. 7, 1840, and was therefore in his thirty-fourth year when he died. He was brought out by Bob Bettle and made his debut in the ring Nov. 30 and Dec. 1, 1858, when he defeated Young Dymock for $150. 35 rounds were fought in 51 minutes. His subsequent ring engagements were as follows: Bent J. O. Rafferty for $100, 16 rounds, 30 minutes, July 4, 1859; bent J. Hartley for $250, 34 rounds in 1 hour 17 minutes, April 5, 1860; bent J. Hartley again for $250, 33 rounds, 1 hour 30 minutes, May 7, 1862; George Holden for $500, 64 rounds, two rings, 2 hours 9 minutes, Aug. 26, 1862; bent Morris Roberts for $1,000, 41 rounds, 2 hours 14 minutes, Sept. 15, 1863; bent J. Fox for $250, 33 rounds, 1 hour 4 minutes, April 17, 1866, fought a draw with George Holden for $1,000, two rings, 41 rounds, 1 hour 52 minutes, Nov. 28, 1866; fought a draw with Harry Taylor for $250, Morris being arrested in 1868; bent Frank Wilson for a purse, 8 rounds, 29 minutes 41 seconds, Feb. 10, 1870. 4. It was in 1867 that he visited this country.

A. W., Westchester.—James Stewart, the Scotch giant, was born at Paisley in 1844. He stood 5 feet 7 1/2 inches and weighed 166 pounds. When in London engaged as a butcher Stewart had several tough bouts in the "East," but his match for money came off at Mace's Rooms, Shoreditch. His opponent was known as Jack Brookes' novice, and they fought with ordinary gloves for a purse. Stewart won after a determined fight, lasting about an hour and a half. The novice was a big 'un and, like Stewart a butcher. After this Stewart was matched against Jim Dove to spar with the knuckles for $100. They fought on two different days. On the first day at Plumstead Marshes and on the second at Long Reach, the match ending in a draw. George Crockett and Nat Lawley seconded Stewart in this fight, and although 2 to 1 was laid on Dove at the outset, Stewart had, if anything, the best of it. In the first ring they fought about 51 minutes and in the second 1 hour 5 minutes. The police stopped the contest. Subsequently Stewart was matched against Tom Taylor, of London, for $250, but on the night prior to the day fixed for the battle there was a disagreement as to the choice of a referee and the stakes were drawn. After this, having challenged all comers across the border without finding an opponent, Stewart was styled "champion of Scotland," and this led to a match between him and Joe McDonald for $250. This came off near Condonat on June 7, 1870. The fight was a most determined one, for although Stewart had his right arm dislocated in the third round by a fall, he stood up for 51 more rounds (in all 62), lasting nearly 7 hours, and the battle was described as the best contested fight that ever took place in Scotland. This was Stewart's last fight with the knuckles. For some time afterward Stewart was on the shelf until he was matched against Tom Allen to box with ordinary gloves for $500, and the affair came off at St. James' Hall, Piccadilly, and ended in a draw, after sparring 24 rounds, and it was evident that neither did their level best. Stewart showed a partiality for remaining in his corner. Stewart's next match was with Tomkins Gilbert, of Lincoln, at the Springfield Recreation Grounds, Glasgow, for $250, in which the Scotchman scored the victory, after boxing 30 minutes. His next opponent was Alf Greenfield, with gloves, for $1,000. Greenfield broke his right arm in the third round, and eventually won on a foul, in 20 rounds, lasting 1 hour 20 minutes.

Ladies' Solid Gold Watches!

Almost every young gentleman prides himself upon carrying a watch of some kind, and gentlemen can with perfect propriety carry a silver watch, an imitation gold, or a nickel watch, provided it is a good timekeeper. Although ladies have the same pride about carrying a watch, and take the same pleasure in doing so that gentlemen do, still the great majority of ladies do not carry watches. There are two reasons for their not doing so.

First it is not considered quite the proper thing for a lady to carry any but a gold watch, and second, Gold Watches have heretofore been so high in price that the majority of young ladies could not afford to own one. Realizing this condition of things much time has been spent in experimenting, and at great expense perfecting a beautiful Ladies' Watch, with solid Gold Hunting cases, which we are enabled to sell at the extremely low price of FIFTEEN DOLLARS making it the and placing it within the reach of almost every young lady in the land. This watch is sold by retail firms at $25.00 each and upwards, but we sell thousands and are satisfied with a very small profit. Young gentlemen who have desired to make their favorite sister or sweetheart a present of a watch, and who have been prevented by the high price of watches from doing so, can now purchase an elegant Gold Watch, without feeling impoverished at the whole year afterward. We make the cases of our New Ladies' Watch of Solid Gold, elegantly engraved, and in every truth, they are "Things of Perfect Beauty." They have fine Nickel Movements, and are fully guaranteed for time. Every watch is put up in a beautiful velvet lined case and sent by Registered Mail on receipt of $15.00. Or we will send the watch C. O. D. if you send $3.00 on account, the balance to be paid on delivery. We send a Double Extra Fine Gold Fob with the watch. The watch chain with the watch on receipt of $3.00 additional. Send money by Registered Mail, Post Office Money Order, or deposit it at the office of this paper.

It is seldom that we have an opportunity to direct attention to anything so really worthy of notice as this Complete Stamping Outfit. While the price is almost ridiculously low for the entire outfit, the number, excellence and variety of the articles furnished almost exceeds belief. Even for a family to do its own stamping the outfit would be of great service; but when it is realized, that by means of the instruction, samples and materials that are included as "Outfits," any lady can easily become a proficient in making choice Kensington Lace of most elegant and graceful patterns, and become skilled in executing every description of perforated stamping and thus make a nice addition to her income in a very easy and pleasant way, it would seem that scarcely anyone would neglect taking advantage of so favorable an opportunity. These stamping outfits are particularly appropriate for holiday presents and, in our opinion, well worthy of attentive consideration.
